PREFACE.

THOSE who have ſtudied that period of our annals which is occupied by the reign of Charles the Firſt and the Commonwealth, not only in the pages of modern hiſtorians and of contemporaries who wrote conſciouſly for poſterity, but alſo in the immenſe maſſes of unclaſſified and often uncatalogued documents, journals, ſtate papers, letters, treatiſes, ballads, and ſermons, in which the hopes, fears, and deſires of the people expreſſed themſelves from day to day, may probably have remarked, if their purſuits have led them to contraſt our Civil War with other portions of Britiſh or European hiſtory, that then, for the firſt time in the modern world, individual perſonality began to exerciſe a marked effect upon contemporary politics. In the preceding ages, from the time indeed when freedom ſunk under the organized imperialiſm of the Cæſars, until the outburſt of modern thought in the ſixteenth century, human progreſs had been but little accelerated by perſonal qualities. The ignorance of external nature was too denſe, the all-pervading influence of the dominant theology too ſtrong, the terrors it wielded and the puniſhments it threatened too frightful for the energy of any one perſon to become conſpicuous in directing public events or moulding the thoughts of others, except in thoſe rare caſes where the minds of men had already been prepared by the Church's teaching, or by their inherent or inherited ſuperſtitions. In the career of St. Bernard indeed, and the few others of his ſtamp, who ſhed ſuch luſtre over the dark times in which they were placed, we ſee the religious inſtinct of Weſtern Chriſtendom ſtirred to a higher pitch of devotion by the labours of a ſingle man; but where the leſſons of the reformer took a direction contrary to eccleſiaſtical teaching (and then theology ſeemed to embrace the whole area of human thought), one reſult only was poſſible. The fate of thoſe who ſtruggled to win freedom for themſelves and their kind is a ſufficient proof that it was neither the want of intellect, energy, nor high-ſouled devotion, that rendered their lives and labours unfruitful. Even the paſſionate prophecy and withering ſcorn of the great Florentine could do nothing towards rouſing mankind from its lethargy. The firſt deſire of his heart was indeed accompliſhed; Dante won for his Beatrice the higheſt place in the ideal world of love and beauty, but againſt the "ſhe-wolf" even the invectives of the "Inferno" were powerleſs.

The education of the European mind has progreſſed ſlowly; it was not until the Tudor period of our hiſtory that ſociety could have exiſted without the protection of a powerful religious caſte. A univerſal theocracy was the only inſtitution ſtrong and free enough to curb the oppreſſor, and with a ſufficiently extended mental viſion to attempt the work of legiſlation: by its means the brutal tyranny of the feudal lord was ſomewhat kept in check; and his fiercer paſſions, at leaſt, did not paſs entirely without rebuke. Laws were made for the protection of ſlaves, infants, and women, ſuch as even a Norman baron or an Italian count feared to diſobey. It does not ſeem poſſible that moral truths could have been brought home to the hearts of the people by any other means. If ſo great a misfortune could have happened as the premature overthrow of this ſpiritual dominion it is almoſt certain that a ſimilar inſtitution, or once differing in outward accidents only, would have taken its place. And if it had not been ſo, the people would have lapſed into mere pagan ſenſualiſm; a compound of Teutonic materialiſm and Southern creature-worſhip without the nobleneſs of the one or the poetry of the other.

The great religious conteſts of the ſixteenth century, while they releaſed the races of Northern Europe from ſubjection to one claſs of ideas which they had outgrown, left almoſt everything to be accompliſhed in the direction of perſonal freedom. It is doubtful whether any of thoſe engaged on either ſide in that memorable ſtrife even underſtood what is now meant by liberty.

The ſingularly complex nature of our political and ſocial relations on the acceſſion of the Stuart dynaſty tended greatly to develope individual energies, and thus to produce that marked contraſt between the Civil-War era and all preceding ones, which is perhaps the moſt intereſting phenomenon preſented by that memorable conteſt. Probably no deſcendant of the Plantagenets, then alive, was more unfitted to rule England than the weak perſon whom political neceſſity forced upon us on the death of the noble-minded Elizabeth. It would have taxed the higheſt energies of a wiſe and brave ſovereign to have governed a land ſo diſtracted with religious factions with dignity and in peace. James poſſeſſed neither courage nor wiſdom, but had the abſence of thoſe virtues been his chief defect, his reign might have cauſed leſs evil. His political bigotry, mitigated as it was in action by his extreme cowardice, was not calculated to produce the worſt reſults; but unfortunately, like many other feeble-minded men, he took intenſe delight in theological ſpeculation. As the head of the eſtabliſhed religion in England it was the obvious duty of the chief magiſtrate to make that body as little offenſive to the people as the nature of ſo ſingular a compromiſe would admit of; but, from influences which it probably would be eaſy to trace to their origin, the king's mind was bent upon purſuing an oppoſite courſe. The extreme nature of the religious factions into which his realms were divided, ſpurred on the zeal of the theologian not to be a miniſter of peace but an enforcer of uniformity. The Catholics, who had received in the early part of the reign ſome ſlight mercy, when the monarch found himſelf ſufficiently powerful to do ſo, were perſecuted with unrelenting ſeverity. The increaſing body of Puritans (a deſignation which muſt be underſtood to include perſons of nearly all varieties of opinion who were oppoſed to deſpotiſm in the ſtate and extreme Epiſcopalian views on Church government) hated the ruling powers almoſt as intenſely as did their brethren of the Roman obedience, and with nearly as good reaſon; for, although they were not ſubject to capital puniſhment, like the religious teachers of the ancient faith, their lives were rendered miſerable by ſtate tyranny. The Puritans certainly had not, at firſt, any ſtrong feelings againſt monarchical power when reſtrained within due bounds,—ſome, indeed, profeſſing to the laſt their deſire for "a covenanted King," but they naturally became, as time wore on, leſs and leſs attached to the exiſting order of things. It is probable that a ſtrong-willed and unprincipled monarch might have played off theſe factions againſt each other with conſiderable perſonal advantage. It is evident that James endeavoured to do ſo, and as he had at times able miniſters about him, it is not unlikely that even he might have ſucceeded had England been his only kingdom; Scotland and Ireland happily preſented unſurmountable obſtacles to the cruſhing out of either of theſe religious bodies. The northern kingdom was entirely Puritan; the Catholic Church in that region had not merely fallen,—its members had been ſo hunted down by their ſucceſſors, that hardly an avowed profeſſor of the old religion was to be found. Epiſcopacy, indeed, was ſtill ſuppoſed to exiſt, but its ſtrange and unedifying hiſtory was ſo well known, that we cannot ſuppoſe it appealed very forcibly to the conſciences of any but thoſe dependent on government patronage. On the other hand, Ireland had clung with the tenacity of deſpair to the mediæval form of Chriſtianity—it was the only thing that connected her with the far-off paſt, that carried back the memories of her poor perſecuted children to times when they had at leaſt one powerful protector on earth from the oppreſſion of their conquerors. This paſſionate attachment decked the mythic paſt with the rainbow tints of unreal beauty, it became part of an Iriſhman's faith that his country had once had a golden age of peace, proſperity, and virtue, under the mild guardianſhip of the Church of God.

The attempts made to convert theſe kingdoms to the king's views were too weak to produce any effect except irritation; but they muſt be borne in mind in calculating the forces which produced the revolution that followed.

Charles was a far nobler man than his father: had he ruled in other times he might have left a favourable impreſſion on poſterity; in the circumſtances in which he was placed his higher qualities were almoſt entirely hidden. Whether it was by force of hereditary tranſmiſſion, or the reſult of education, that Charles reſembled James cannot now be known, but the ſame weak nature is remarkable in the child as in the parent,—the ſame obſtinacy, the ſame theological inſtincts with even leſs diſtruſt of his own power of enforcing conviction, and a greater affection for the mechanical parts of religious worſhip. His faith in the ſanctity of his own office was probably more ſincere than his father's. It was dangerous in proportion to its ſincerity.

The hiſtory of the political and religious ſtruggles of theſe reigns, of the forty years' battle for liberty, fought with varying ſucceſs at Weſtminſter when there was a parliament at the Council Board, in the law-courts and the ſhires when the king ruled alone, has come down to us in a very unattractive form. The various leaders have as yet had but little juſtice done to their memories, the more obſcure men have quite paſſed out of mind. Let us remember that to them we owe much of what followed both of good and evil.

The long conteſt, ere an appeal to arms was thought of, prepared Engliſh minds for ſelf-government, and ſhook to its baſe that belief in the holineſs of the kingly office which the Reformation had foſtered, and which ſubſequent events had developed into an article of faith. Ere the war of words was ſuſpended by a ſterner conflict, I believe that among the maſs of the people the dream of the divine right of kings had paſſed away for ever. A figment ſuch as that, once ſhattered, could never be reſtored; even the ſaturnalia of the Reſtoration could only reproduce its ſemblance in thoſe profeſſionally intereſted. The cry—found no echo in men's hearts. If the reader wiſhes to hear it, and is not to be deterred by blaſphemy or filth, let him read the ſermons of the court-preachers and the rhyme-books of the court-poets.

It is not my intention, in this reprint of a Civil-War tract, to trace, even in the mereſt ſkeleton manner, the hiſtory of the period. A word or two ſeems, however, to be required to account for the appearance of this little book. I have long been making collections relative to the lives of thoſe perſons who were engaged on both ſides during the Great Civil War. In the work I have in progreſs I ſhall include, as far as poſſible, every officer who bore a commiſſion from King or Parliament, and many other perſons who rendered themſelves conſpicuous in the convulſions of the time. Of courſe I ſhall not omit to give a place to the many noble women alſo who ſuffered on either ſide. It will be readily underſtood, that although the work in queſtion will be made as conciſe as is poſſible, conſiſtently with communicating the facts of the various lives, it is yet a laborious undertaking, which cannot be brought to a concluſion for ſome years. It was, however, ſuggeſted to me by my publiſher, that a reprint of the following Army Liſt would be welcomed by many ſtudents as a handy work of reference in reading contemporary hiſtorians. Its uſefulneſs to thoſe engaged in topographical and genealogical ſtudies is evident. To ſuch a book it was perhaps unneceſſary to add notes; I have, nevertheleſs, for the convenience of the general reader, given a line or two of biographical memoranda to the names of moſt of thoſe perſons who rendered themſelves prominent. To have enlarged them further ſo as to include the more obſcure would have been but to anticipate very imperfectly a future publication. The tract, of which the following pages are a reprint, is preſerved in the Bodleian Library. I never ſaw another copy, but I believe one or two more exiſt; it is, however, of extreme rarity. The liſt of the Earl of Eſſex's army is to be found alſo in a ſeparate pamphlet, with which this edition has been compared. A reprint of its title-page occurs here in the proper place.

Although the date 1642 occurs on the title, it is certain that this Liſt was not iſſued until that year had, according to modern computation, cloſed. It will be borne in mind, however, that the legal year in the ſeventeenth century began on the 25th of March, the feaſt of the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, and that, therefore, a book iſſued from the preſs before that day in the year 1643 would bear the date of the previous year. The occurrence of Philip Skippon, as "Serjeant Major Generall and Preſident of the Councell of Warre," is deciſive on this point.* It is not ſo eaſy to account for the name of "Sir Faithful Forteſcue" being retained in the liſt of the Parliamentary army.

My eſpecial thanks are due to Monſieur J. A. Van Lennep of Zeyſt, near Utrecht, for a long and extremely intereſting communication relative to Dr. Doreſlaus, which I have uſed in the note attached to that perſon's name. I have a melancholy pleaſure alſo in expreſſing my obligations to the late Rev. John Ward, of Wath Rectory, near Ripon.

NOTE.

To this Second Edition I have added an Appendix, conſiſting of four other liſts of ſoldiers, which will be found uſeful by ſtudents of ſeventeenth-century hiſtory. The notes alſo have been reviſed and added to, and ſome errors corrected.

I have received valuable information from Colonel Cheſter, the Rev. Edward Saint Leger, and William H. Turner, Eſq.

The Index is mainly the work of my daughters, Florence and Mabel.

indicated. He was ſeverely, but not fatally, wounded by a blow on the head with a pole-axe at Lanſdowne fight, July 5, 1643. Another perſon of this name, Sir William Vaughan, fought for the King in South Wales, Cheſhire, and Shropſhire. He was killed near Dublin, Aug. 22, 1649.

[56] Sir Joſeph Wagſtaffe was wounded when the Royaliſts took Lichfield, 1643. Engaged in the Weſtern riſing, 1655, and was with difficulty diſſuaded by his companions from hanging the Parliamentary Judges and the High Sheriff of the county, who had fallen into their hands at Saliſbury. After the ruin of the enterpriſe he eſcaped abroad.—CLARENDON's Hiſtory, p. 825.

[57] The Coneys were a Lincolnſhire family, ſeveral of whoſe members were engaged on the Royal ſide during the Civil War. I am unable to identify the perſon mentioned above with any certainty. Sir Sutton Coney, ſon and heir of Sir William Coney, Knight, compounded for his eſtate in the ſum of 2648*l.* A Captain Coney is ſtated to have been ſlain ex parte regis at Whalley, in Lancaſhire. A William Coney was one of the Lincolnſhire gentlemen who offered to ſubſcribe horſes for the King in the ſummer of 1642. A Richard Coney of Grantham was indicted for High Treaſon at Grantham Seſſions in the ſpring of 1643, by the adherents of the Parliament. A man deſcribed as "Captaine Corney," but who I believe to be the perſon who ſerved under Sir Thomas Glenham, was taken priſoner by Oliver Cromwell at Burleigh Houſe, and ſent in cuſtody to Cambridge, in July, 1643. The Elizabethan Heralds ſay that the firſt of the Coneys who ſettled in England came from "Byam," in France, with Iſabella, wife of Edward II. There is a pedigree of the family in the Lincolnſhire Herald's Viſitation of 1562. Arms, ſable, a bar and two barrulets between three conies current, argent. MS. F. 22. Queen's Coll. Oxf. fol. 38. Yorke's Union of Honour, 2nd, pages 28. Tanner MS. LXII. I. fol. 196. Decl. of Commons upon two letters ſent by Sir John Brookes. Dring, 24. Mr. Charles Dalliſon, his Speech, fol. 1642 (Soc. Wortley Hall for the King. He was taken priſoner at Walton Hall near Wakefield, the ſeat of the knightly family of Waterton, on the 3rd of June, 1644. Authorities differ as to the time and place of his death; it is, however, certain that he departed to his reſt before the monarchy was reſtored. He was the author of ſeveral books, a liſt of which may be ſeen in Wood's Athenæ Oxon. His arms were argent, on a bend between ſix martlets gules, three bezants. Motto, Τας φιλιας σπουδαζω, τας εχθρας καταφρονεω.—Hunter's Deanery of Doncaſter, vol. ii. pp. 308–326.

[59] Serjeant Major Sheldon was mortally wounded at Lanſdowne fight, July 5, 1643, by the exploſion of an ammunition-waggon.—Clarendon's Hiſt. p. 404.

[60] William Villiers, Viſcount Grandiſon in the peerage of Ireland, ſon and heir of Sir Edward Villiers, Preſident of Munſter; brother to George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, by his wife Barbara, daughter of Sir John St. John of Tregoſe, co. Wilts, and niece to Oliver St. John, created Viſcount Grandiſon, with limitation of the title to his niece's poſterity. Lord Grandiſon was wounded at the ſiege of Briſtol, July 26, 1643, and died of his wounds at Oxford the 29th of September following. He lies buried under a ſtately monument in Chriſt Church Cathedral, which his daughter, Barbara Villiers, afterwards Ducheſs of Cleveland, erected to his memory.

[61] Sir John Digby, a younger ſon of the Earl of Briſtol (note 39). Raiſed a troop of horſe for the King; commanded the cavalry at the battle of Stratton, May 16, 1643. He was one of the ſix perſons excepted from mercy at the ſurrender of Pontefract Caſtle, but ſucceeded in eluding his enemies by lying hid within its precincts for about ten days, and then making his eſcape unobſerved. Sir John Digby ſurvived the Reſtoration. —Clarendon's Hiſt. pp. 397, 425, 670. Surtees' Miſcellany, vol. i. pp. 2, 93.

[62] John Tempeſt, ninth ſon of Sir Stephen Tempeſt of . . . . co. York. Slain at the taking of Drogheda, Aug. 14, 1649. He was a Roman Catholic. Arms, argent, a bend between ſix martlets, ſable.—Dugdale's Herald's Viſit. Yorks. 1665–6, p. 360.

[63] The Houſe of Commons reſolved on 10th Dec. 1642, that Sir John Spilman, Knight, Sir William Doyly, Captain Crane, and other perſons of the county of Norfolk, ſhould be "forthwith ſent for as delinquents for affronting the committees when they were met upon the ſervice of the Parliament." John Crane of Longhton, co. Bucks, was fined 1080*l.* on 23rd Sep. 1647; his offence being "that he deſerted his dwelling and lived in Oxford" when it was a royal garriſon—Com. Jour. II. 884; V. 313.

[64] Robert Hillyard of Beverley and of Wineſtead, co. York, ſon of Sir Chriſtopher Hillyard, Knight. Created a Baronet after the Reſtoration. Arms, azure, three mullets, or.—Poulson's Holderneſs, vol. ii. p. 473.

[65] Gentleman of the bedchamber to Charles I. One of thoſe who accompanied him, when Prince of Wales, to Spain. Died abroad before the Reſtoration.

[66] Three brothers of the family of Vavaſour of Haſelwood, co. York, were in the King's ſervice. They are thus noticed in Dugdale's Pedigree (Herald's Viſit. co. York, 1665–6, p. 345):—

"I. Sir Walter Vavaſour of Haſelwood, Bart. Colonell of a Regiment of Horſe under the right honorable Willm̄ Marqueſſe of Newcaſtle, for the ſervice of K. Charles the firſt, in the times of the late Rebellion. Æt. 53 ann. 13 Aug. 1666.

"II. Willm̄ Vavaſour a Major in that Regim̄t of Horſe under his brother.

"III. Thomas Vavaſour ſlayne in y^e^ Battaile of Marſton Moore neer Yorke, fighting on the behalfe of K. Ch. the firſt, a^o^ 1644."

[67] Philip Stanhope, firſt Baron Stanhope of Shelford, and Earl of Cheſterfield, had two ſons in the Royal Army.

Ferdinando, his fourth ſon, M.P. for Tamworth in the Parliament of 1640; D.CL. Oxford, 1642. Slain at Bridgford, co. Notts, 1643. This is probably the perſon here indicated.

Philip, fifth ſon, loſt his life at his father's ſeat at Shelford when it was taken by ſtorm, Oct. 27, 1645.

[74] Henry Wilmot, ſecond Baron Wilmot in Ireland. Created Baron Wilmot of Adderbury, co. Oxford, June 29, 1643, and Earl of Rocheſter, Dec. 13, 1652. He had ſerved in the Low Country Wars before the beginning of the domeſtic troubles. Appointed Commiſſary-General of the Horſe in the expedition into Scotland. Taken priſoner by the Scotch at the battle of Newburn, Aug. 28, 1640. Reſtored by the Commiſſioners who met at the treaty of Ripon, September, 1640. Wounded at the battle near Worceſter, Sept. 23, 1642. Defeated Sir William Waller at Roundway Down, July 5, 1643. Arreſted by the King for high treaſon, 1644. Accompanied Charles II. to Scotland, 1650. Died, 1659.

[75] Robert Needham of Shenton, co. Salop, ſecond Viſcount Needham in the Peerage of Ireland. Died 1653, and was ſucceeded, as third Viſcount, by his ſon Robert, who joined in the riſing in favour of Charles II., Auguſt, 1659. In "a liſt of the priſoners of Quality now ſecured in Cheſter," publiſhed in the Mercurius Politicus, Sept. 1–8, 1659, occur "Lord Kilmorey" and "Mr. Thomas Nedham, Brother to Lord Kilmorey."

[76] Sir Faithful Forteſcue was ſecond ſon of John Forteſcue of Buckland Filleigh, co. Devon, and Suſannah, daughter of Sir John Chicheſter of Rawleigh. He married, circa 1604, Anne, daughter of Gerard, firſt Viſcount Moore. By this lady he had ten ſons and ſix daughters. His ſecond wife was Eleanor Symonds, a widow, by whom he had no iſſue. At the Reſtoration he was made a Gentleman of the Privy Chamber. He was colonel of the third troop of horſe raiſed for the expedition into Ireland, 1642, and with his troop was draughted into the Parliamentary Army under the command of the Earl of Eſſex. 2. Iſaac Doreſlaer, miniſter at Hensbrock, 1627; at Eukhuizen, 1628, where he died, 1652.

3. David Doreſlaer, miniſter of the Dutch coloniſts in Brazil. Returned to Holland and became miniſter at Hobrede and Oſthniazen, 1644; Hultezen, 1649; Tholen, 1650; Zierikzen, 1654. Died, 1671.

Iſaac Doriſlaus.

Iſaac Doriſlaus was a friend of Sir Henry Mildmay, and the firſt Lord Brooke. Through the influence of the latter he was appointed to read a hiſtorical lecture in Cambridge; but was ſoon ſilenced on account of his maintaining anti-monarchical principles. His great knowledge of Civil Law cauſed his nomination to the office of Judge Advocate of the Army. For the ſame reaſon he was ſhortly afterwards made one of the Judges of the Court of Admiralty. He made himſelf eſpecially hateful to the Royaliſts by aſſiſting to prepare the charge of High Treaſon againſt Charles I. In the beginning of May, 1649, he ſailed for Holland as Envoy from the Engliſh Parliament to the Hague; he had only ſpent a very ſhort time there when, on the 12th, or, according to others, the 15th of May, as he was taking his ſupper at the Witte Zwaan (White Swan) Inn, ſome five or ſix men in maſks entered the houſe, blew out the lights in the paſſage, and ruſhed into the public room, where he, in company with eleven other gueſts, was ſitting. Two of the conſpirators immediately made a murderous attack on a Dutch gentleman named Grijp van Valkenſteyn, ſuppoſing him to be the Engliſh Envoy. Finding out their miſtake, however, they ſet upon Doreſlaus, and ſlew him with many wounds, exclaiming as they did the deed, "Thus dies one of the King's Judges." The leader of this execrable gang was Col. Walter Whitford, ſon of Walter Whitford, D.D., of Monkland, in Scotland. He received a penſion for this "generous action" (Wood) after the Reſtoration. The Engliſh Parliament gave their faithful ſervant a magnificent funeral in Weſtminſter Abbey, June 14, 1649; but after the Reſtoration thoſe in power diſturbed the body. His duſt now reſts with that of Admiral Blake, and others ſuch as he, in a pit in St. Margaret's Churchyard.—John Loden Gollfried's Kronyck, iv. 454. Van der Da, Biographiſch Woodenbock, in voc.

[106] Stephen Marſhall, B.D., was born at Godmancheſter and educated at Cambridge, and afterwards held the benefice of Finchfield in Eſſex. He ſpent the laſt two years of his life at Ipſwich. His body was buried in the ſouth aiſle of Weſtminſter Abbey, 23rd Nov. 1655, but was dug up at the Reſtoration.—NEAL's Hiſt. of the Puritans, ed. 1822, vol. iv. pp. 133, 319. Pepys ſtates in his Diary, 26th Oct. 1667, that "Mrs. Price tells me that the two Marſhalls at the King's houſe are Stephen Marſhall's, the great Preſbyterian's daughters." The names of theſe two actreſſes, who were ſaid to be women of looſe morals, were Anne and Beche Marſhall. I am not aware that proof has been given that they were in reality the children of this noted preacher.

John, who was created Earl of Bolinbroke, co. Lincoln, Dec. 28, 1624; was ſummoned to Parliament in his father's barony of Saint John. Slain at Edge Hill, Oct. 23, 1642.

[117] A member of the family of Palæologus of Landulph, co. Cornwall, who are believed to have been a branch of the Imperial houſe of Conſtantinople. The Engliſh Palæologoi have long been extinct in the male line, both here and in the Weſt Indies, to which ſome of the members of the family emigrated. Their blood, tranſmitted through females, doubtleſs yet flows in the veins of many a Devonſhire and Corniſh gentleman.

"Fors non mutat genus."

The perſon here indicated may poſſibly be Theodore Palæologus, ſon of Theodore Palæologus of Landulph, who died Jan. 21, 1636. This Theodore was afterwards a ſailor, and died at ſea in 1693, on board the Royal Charles. From his will, which was proved at Doctors' Commons, it ſeems that he had no iſſue.

The following entry occurs in the Burial Regiſter of Weſtminſter Abbey. It is probable that it relates to the Theodore Palæologus of Lord St. John's Regiment.

"1644 Theodorus Pahiologus was b[d] near the lady St.
John's tomb May 3."

[118] Robert Greville, ſecond Baron Brooke. Slain at the ſiege of Lichfield, March 2, 1642.

[119] Son of Richard Lilburn of Thickley-Punchardon, co. Durham. An apprentice to a cloth-packer in Saint Swithin's Lane, London. Became clerk to William Prynne, in or about 1632. Whipped at a cart's tail from the Fleet Priſon to Weſtminſter, and afterwards ſtood in the pillory, for having written a book againſt biſhops. His whole life was one long ſtruggle againſt authority. [124] John Robartes, ſecond Baron Robartes of Truro, co. Cornwall. Succeeded to his father's title, 1634. Created Viſcount Bodmin, co. Cornwall, and Earl of Radnor, July 23, 1679. Died at Chelſea, July 17, 1685. Buried at Lanhedrock, co. Cornwall.

[125] The eldeſt ſon of Calybute Downing of Shennington, co. Glouceſter. Lord of the Manors of Sugarſwell and Tyſoe, co. Warwick. A commoner of Oriel College, Oxford, 1623. Rector of Hickford, co. Bucks, and of Weſt Ildſey, co. Berks. Exchanged the latter rectory for that of Hackney, near London. Died at Hackney, 1644. Calybute Downing had the misfortune to be the father of George Downing, a man notorious for one of the blackeſt acts of perfidy to be found in our annals. George Downing began life as a miniſter of religion, having been Colonel Okey's Chaplain.

Nicholas Garth.[127]

He was afterwards "a ſoldier in Scotland, and at length ſcout Maſter general there, and a burgeſs for ſeverall corporations in that kingdom." He became loyal at the Reſtoration, and was diſpatched as envoy extraordinary into Holland, where, under the promiſe of ſafety, he trepanned Colonel Okey, Miles Corbet, and Colonel Barkſtead into his power, and ſent them over to England to ſuffer death for having been members of the commiſſion for trying King Charles I. George Downing was created a Baronet, July, 1663. Arms, barruly of eight, argent and vert, a gryphon rampant, or.

[126] The ſecond ſon of Sir Richard Cholmley of Whitby, co. York. He twice beſieged his brother, Sir Hugh Cholmley, who had deſerted the ſervice of the Parliament, in his caſtle of Scarborough. Survived the Reſtoration, and is ſaid to have been active in bringing about that event.

[127] Nicholas Garth was not improbably a member of the family of Garth of Headlam, co. Durham. The name Nicholas does not occur in the very carefully compiled pedigree by the late John Richard Walbran, Eſq. Arms of Garth of Headlam and of Bolham, co. Durham, or, two lions [149] This is probably the James Temple who was one of the commiſſioners for the trial of King Charles I. He was tried after the Reſtoration, but the extreme penalty of the law was not inflicted. Suppoſed to have died in the Tower.

[150] John Alured was a Yorkſhireman, probably a native of Hedon in Holderneſs, which borough he repreſented in the Parliament of 1640. He was one of King Charles I.'s judges, and ſigned the warrant for his execution. Although he died before 1660, his name was put in the act of attainder that his property might be forfeited. [151] Sir John Hotham, Knight, was created a baronet, January 14, 1621. He was Governor of Hull at the breaking out of the Civil War, and refuſed King Charles I. admittance into that town, March 23, 1642, for which he was proclaimed a traitor by the King. He and his ſon, Sir John Hotham, Knight, were afterwards diſcovered to be correſponding with the Earl of Newcaſtle and other Royaliſts, for which acts they were tried and ſuffered death, 1645. Sir John Hotham repreſented a good old Yorkſhire family. He had five wives—1, Katherine, daughter of Sir John Rhodes of Barlborough, co. Derby; 2, Anne, daughter of Ralf Rookeſby [Rokeby], a far-away kinſwoman of the Editor's; 3, Frances, daughter of John Legard of Ganton, co. York; 4, Katherine, daughter of Sir William Bamborough of Ouſan, co. York; 5, Sarah, daughter of Thomas Anlably of Etton, co. York. John Hotham the younger was ſon of his firſt wife: he was married thrice—1, to Frances, daughter of Sir John Wray of Glentworth, Baronet; 2, to Margaret, daughter of Thomas, Viſcount Emeley; 3, to Iſabell, daughter of Sir Henry Anderſon of Long Cowton, co. York. The arms of Hotham are Barry of ten argent and azure, on a canton or, a Corniſh chough ſable, legged gules.—Viſit. Ebor. 336.

"1644-5, Jan. 1, John Hotham, Eſqir. Beheaded for betraing his truſt to y^e^ ſtate."

[152] Nathaniel Fienes, ſecond ſon of William, eighth Baron, and firſt Viſcount Say and Sele, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of John Temple of Stow, co. Bucks. He was one of the committee nominated by Parliament to accompany Charles I. into Scotland. Defeated by Prince Rupert near Worceſter, Sept. 23, 1642. Governor of Briſtol, which he ſurrendered to Prince Rupert, July 26, 1643, for which act of reputed cowardice he was tried and condemned to death, but pardoned. Keeper of the Great Seal to the Protector Richard Cromwell. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Elliot of Port Elliot in Cornwall. Died at Newton Toney, near Saliſbury, Dec. 16, 1669.

The cavaliers made merry over the defeat of Fienes and his followers before Worceſter. More than one piece of doggerel relating to this adventure has come down to modern times:—

"Thither came Fines, with armes complete,
The town to take and Byron defeat,
Proviſions were made but he ſtaid not to eat,
Which no body can deny.

"But as ſoon as he heard our great guns play,
With a flea in his ear he run quite away,
Like the lawfull begotten ſon of Lord Say,
Which no body can deny."

Thoſe Officers that are not mentioned in theſe Liſts, have not as yet received their Commiſſions by reaſon of their ſuddain imployment in the Expedition.

A true Copie of the Inſtructions agreed upon by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, and ſent to his Excellency the Earle of Eſſex Lord Generall of the Army, concerning the advancing of his Forces towards His Majeſty, &c.

FIRST you ſhall carefully reſtraine all Impieties, Prophaneneſſe, and Diſorders, Ryot, Inſolence, and Plundering in your Souldiers, as well by ſtrict and ſevere puniſhment of ſuch offences, as by all other meanes which you in your wiſedomes ſhall thinke fit.

Secondly, your Lordſhip is to march with ſuch forces as you thinke fit towards the Army, raiſed in his Majeſties Name againſt the Parliament and Kingdome, and with them, or any part of them, to fight at ſuch time and place as you ſhall judge to conduce to the peace and ſafety of the Kingdom; And you ſhall uſe your utmoſt endeavours by Battaile or otherwiſe to reſcue his Majeſties perſon, and the perſons of the Prince, and Duke of Yorke, out of the hands of thoſe deſperate perſons who are now about them.

Thirdly, you ſhall take an opportunitie in ſome ſafe and honourable way, to cauſe the Petition of both Houſes of Parliament herewith ſent unto you, to be preſented unto his Majeſtie, and if his Majeſtie ſhall pleaſe thereupon to withdraw himſelfe from the forces now about him, and to reſort to the Parliament, you ſhall cauſe all theſe forces to diſband, and ſhall ſecure and defend his Majeſtie with a ſufficient ſtrength in his returne.

Fourthly, you ſhall publiſh and declare, that if any, who have been ſeduced by the falſe aſperſions caſt upon the proceedings of the Parliament, as to aſſiſt the King in the acting of thoſe dangerous Counſels, ſhall willingly within ten dayes after ſuch publication in the Army, returne to their dutie, not doing any hoſtile act within the time limited, and joyne themſelves with the Parliament, in defence of Religion, his Majeſties perſon, the Liberties and Lawes of the Kingdome, and priviledges of Parliament, with their perſons and Eſtates, as the Members of both Houſes, and the reſt of the Kingdome have done: That the Lords and Commons will be ready upon their ſubmiſſion to receive ſuch perſons in ſuch manner as they ſhall have cauſe to acknowledge they have been uſed with clemency and favour: Provided, that this ſhall not extend to admit any man into either Houſe of Parliament who ſtands ſuſpended, without giving ſatisfaction to the Houſe whereof he ſhall be a Member: and except all perſons who ſtand impeached, or particularly Voted in either Houſe of Parliament for any delinquency whatſoever; Excepting likewiſe ſuch Adherents of thoſe who ſtand impeached in Parliament of Treaſon, as have been eminent perſons and chiefe Actors in thoſe Treaſons; And except the Earle of Briſtoll, the Earle of Cumberland, the Earle of New-Caſtle, the Earle Rivers, Secretary Nicholas, Maſter Endimion Porter, Maſter Edward Hide, the Duke of Richmond, the Earle of Carnarvan, the Lord Viſcount Newarke, the Lord Viſcount Faulkland, being one of the principall Secretaries of State to his Majeſtie.

Fifthly, you ſhall apprehend the perſons of all theſe who ſtand impeached in Parliament, or have been declared Traytors by both or either Houſe of Parliament, or other Delinquents, and you ſhall ſend them unto the Parliament to receive condigne puniſhment according to their offences.

Sixthly, you ſhall receive the Loanes, or Contributions of Money, Plate, or Horſe from all his Majeſties loving Subjects, which they ſhall be willing to make for the ſupport of the charge of the Army, and better diſcharge of the ſervice of the Common-wealth; And you ſhall certifie all ſuch ſummes of Money, and the value of ſuch Horſes, that the perſons thereupon may have the publique faith for payment to be made unto them, as to others of his Majeſties Subjects upon the ſubſcription of Money, Plate, and Horſe.

Seventhly, you ſhall carefully protect all his Majeſties loving Subjects from rapine and violence by any of the Cavaliers, or other of his Majesties pretended Army, or by any of the Souldiers of the Army which you command; and you shall cause the Armour and Goods of any person to be restored to them from whom they have been unjustly taken.

Eighthly, you shall observe such further Directions and Instructions as you from time to time receive from both Houses of Parliament.

A List of his Majesties Navie Royall, and Merchants Ships; Their Names, Captaines, and Lievtenants, their Men and Burthens in every one, now setting forth for the Guard of the narrow Seas, and for Ireland this yeare 1642.

[162] A member of a good family in the Iſle of Wight, where he retired when put out of his command on the navy declaring againſt the King. During the King's impriſonment in that iſland he chanced to be at Newport, where he heard an account, probably much exaggerated, of the indignities which the King had to ſuffer, "and was ſo much tranſported with . . . . . fury, being a man of more courage than of prudence or circumſpection, that he cauſed a drum to be preſently beaten, and put himſelf at the head of the people who flocked together, and cried, 'For God, the king, and the people!' and ſaid 'he would lead them to the Caſtle and reſcue the king from his captivity.'" Captain Burley was, for this raſh act, tried for high treaſon, and ſuffered the extreme penalty of the law.—Clarendon's Hiſt. p. 629.

[171] Sir Thomas Lunsford, Kt., ſon of Thomas Lunsford of Wilegh, co. Suſſex, by his wife Katherine, daughter of Sir Thomas Fludd of Milgate, co. Kent, ſiſter to Dr. Robert Fludd, alias de Fluctibus the Myſtic. Abſurd ſtories were current during the war, repreſenting Sir Thomas as a cannibal, one who delighted in eating the fleſh of babies. In one of the ſatirical hymns that were current we find this petition:—

"From Fielding and from Vavaſour,
Both ill-affected men;
From Lunsford eke deliver us,
That eateth up childeren."—Rump Songs, I. 65.

Sir Walter Scott quotes in Woodſtock (chap. xx.) a verſe from a contemporary ſong which ſets forth how

"The poſt who came from Coventry,
Riding on a red rocket,
Did tidings tell, how Lunsford fell,
A child's hand in his pocket."

A Liſt of ſuch Engliſh and Scotch Commanders, as Captains, Lievtenants, and Enſignes, and Sergeants, as have left their command under the PRINCE OF ORANGE, from his leager at Rhineberk, with the names of each Captain's Garriſon.

[The following liſt exiſts as a broadſide among the King's Pamphlets in he Britiſh Muſeum. If not unique, it is of a high degree of rarity. The date of its publication is probably fixed within a few days by a manuſcript memorandum of the collector, who records that he acquired it "Aug. 12, 1642." After the name of Serjeant Philpot—that is, at the bottom of the firſt column in the original—there is written, "Theſe are for the King's ſervices." Whether this refers to the names in that column only, or to the whole liſt, may be a matter of doubt.]
